

The Quality Choice for Post-Discharge Outreach

Hospital studies show that many patients forget most of what they've been told by the time they get home! This often leads to new medical problems. Our Post-Discharge Outreach program helps make sure our members' health care needs are met even after they leave the hospital.*

Help After the Hospital

Almost any patient can get an infection or have problems after leaving the hospital. And discharged patients may not notice new symptoms right away. Or the symptoms may be masked by medications they are taking. Our Post-Discharge Outreach program can:

Ease the Hospital-to-Home Transition

A QualChoice care manager can reduce a member's anxiety. They can clarify discharge instructions, discuss prescriptions, schedule follow-up appointments and provide advice.

Improve Understanding

Engaged and informed patients are much more likely to understand and follow their discharge instructions correctly. This ensures a full recovery and makes the need for more hospital stays less likely.

Provide Assistance

To ensure the right care, a care manager may help the member communicate any needs or requests to the doctor. He or she may also help get authorization (approval) for services when needed, and spot potential complications.

Reduce the Need for Another Hospital Stay

Hospital stays are stressful for members--and costly. So we take a proactive approach. We identify members who may be at risk for readmission, and call them after they leave the hospital. Members at risk include those with a complex discharge plan, a history of readmissions, or a history of frequent emergency use. By reaching out to these members, we can help in a number of ways. This helps to ensure a complete recovery and less chance of repeat hospital stays!

For support following a hospital discharge, call us at 501.228.7111 or 800.235.7111 and ask to speak to a care manager.
